

John Capp
Director – Global Safety Strategy & Vehicle Programs
General Motors Product Development

John currently is Director of Global Safety Strategy & Vehicle Programs at General Motors and is responsible for setting and executing vehicle safety strategy and performance. John has also served in executive positions in Electrical Engineering, and in Research and Development and has led much of the planning of GM's advanced technology in the areas of active safety, driver assist, automated driving, and connected vehicle safety.

John holds a bachelor of engineering from Kettering University, and a master of engineering from Purdue University, and has nearly 30 years of product engineering and advanced development experience.